ALL-INCENDIARY RAID ON JAPAN'S CAPITAL

City Reported In Flames

"THE greatest fleet of Super-Fortresses ever assembled to-day attacked Tokyo from bases in the Marianas," Reuter reported last night from Washington, quoting a 20th U.S. Air Force communiqué.

Over 300 Super-Fortresses dropped the largest bombload per aircraft ever carried in a single mission by 20th Bomber Command. The attack was directed against industrial targets, it was stated.

The Super-Fortresses attacked soon after midnight (Tokyo time) from bases on Tinian, Saipan and Guam, in their second night appearance over the city, says Reuter's Correspondent in Guam, Barbara Finch, who cabled later that the raid was an all-incendiary attack—the first of this kind—and left the capital a mass of flames.

A New York Reuter cable states that Japanese Radio yesterday reported that the Tokyo and Yokohama area was raided by at least 50 Super-Fortresses between midnight and 1 a.m. on Saturday. "Fires are still burning," it was stated.

General Masumura, Chief of the Army Press Section of Japanese Imperial Headquarters, said: "The Japanese nation must put forth every ounce of its energy at this critical stage to fight it out to a successful conclusion."

Commenting on a New York report of a new U.S. landing on Mindano Island, Japanese Radio said that a force of 77 U.S. warships, including 4 battleships and 9 cruisers, took part in the landing.

Carndonagh Seizures May Continue

THE situation on the Carndonagh, Co. Donegal, front is quiet, the bailiffs and the police having withdrawn. The townspeople, however, expect their return, together with military reinforcements, on Thursday next, when further seizures will be attempted.

The President, Mr. de Valera, and the Minister for Justice have each replied to the telegrams sent them by the Very Rev. J. Bonner, Chairman of the Town Tenant and Leaseholders' Association, to the effect that nothing can be done to assist the members of their association in their "passive resistance."

In his telegram, Mr. de Valera's secretary, said: "I have to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of March 1st, and express regret that the Taoiseach has no power to intervene in the matter dealt with in your telegram." The President's secretary replied: "I am desired by the President to acknowledge receipt of your telegram. He asks to express that it is not his practice to intervene in matters of this nature"; and finally, the Minister for Justice, Mr. G. Boland, expressed his regret that he could not do anything.

In an interview with our correspondent last night, the Rev. J. Bonner said that the townspeople were going to stand firm, even though they expected the seizures would be on a bigger scale next time. The largest seizure on Thursday last was a £60 counter-scale from a house, against which there was a decree for £7. £40 worth of furniture was taken where there was a decree for £24. Nine houses have been entered, and 22 are to be dealt with next Thursday. Four householders have been allowed by the landlords to pay their rents.

No action has yet been taken against residents of Mount Charles, who are members of the Town Tenants Leaseholders' Association, but it is believed that they are negotiating with the landlords. Local rumour has it that the affected people in this town, which is 4½ miles from Carndonagh, may refuse to pay their rents, as the Carndonagh residents did two years ago.

A public meeting has been called for to-morrow at Carndonagh, to which representatives of all towns in Donegal are being invited. No T.D.s are to be invited.

Fall of Mandalay is Imminent

THE fall of Mandalay is expected hourly as British, Indians and Gurkhas push in against badly-co-ordinated opposition, states Reuter's special correspondent.

Hard fighting is going on on Mandalay Hill, N.E. of Fort Dufferin, according to headquarters report, which announced that leading elements were meeting resistance in the area of Government House, and that other forces, ...er crossing the Mandalay Canal, were in contact with the Japanese N.E. of the city.

The Japanese, resisting strongly on Mandalay Hill, are in danger of being cut off from those in the city proper through the 14th Army's capture of the racecourse, says Reuter.

Resistance to troops who penetrated south of the walls of Fort Dufferin has not been heavy.

The Chinese 1st Army has moved 2 miles south of captured Lashio in the northern combat area.

German Commando Raid

Black Market "Anarchy" in Belgium

WHEN the Belgian Prime Minister, M. Van Acker, announced yesterday in Brussels that he is handing in to Parliament next Tuesday a new bill on special powers for internal administration he declared that "a state of anarchy" exists in the supply of food, and that the country's stocks are down to zero.

Present legislation, he added, is too weak to stamp out the black market. "Some civil servants are guilty of fraudulent practices, which endanger the moral and physical health of the nation."

Declaring that a purge is necessary in all sections, Van Acker said: "The Government will demand full powers to save the country from corruption."—(Reuter and A.P.)

Mayo Farmers On Murder Charge

John McNicholas, Lismorane, Bohala, and Michael Healy, Gortnasilla, farmers, were arrested late on Thursday night and taken before a Special Court held by District Justice Corry at Swinford Guards station, when they were charged with the murder of John Lavin (47), another farmer, of Gortnasilla.

Lavin's body was found by the roadside two miles outside Swinford on Wednesday night.

The two men were remanded to Charlestown Court on March 14th. At the inquest Dr. John McGrath, State Pathologist, said that death was due to injuries which could have been inflicted with a blunt instrument.

Lavin was walking home from Swinford Fair on Wednesday night when he was killed, and his body was found by Guard Michael McNamara, who, with Dr. Cawley, tried to revive him.

Lavin is survived by his widow and three children.

£2,250 Theft Alleged

Christopher Farrelly (38), Glenarm road, Whitehall, and Kevin Clancy (24), no fixed address, were remanded yesterday in the Dublin District Court, charged with conspiracy and with breaking into 5 Lower Sherrard street and stealing £2,250, the property of Isaac Albert, on February 12th last.

In a statement made to Inspector M. Farrell, Clancy said that, with Farrelly, they went to a house in Lower Sherrard street, where he told a maid he had been sent by Mr. Albert to take measurements for redecorations. The maid admitted them without question. Farrelly then searched the rooms, while Clancy kept watch. From a box in a wardrobe Farrelly took a bundle of notes, and from a small cabinet he took notes which were foreign. Afterwards they counted the notes, and Farrelly gave him £450, of which he gave £400 to the Inspector.

Belfast Students' Strike Threat

The students of Queen's University, Belfast, at a meeting last night, passed a resolution protesting against the action of the University authorities in prohibiting the wearing of fancy dress on Students' day, when collections are made in the streets on behalf of local hospitals.

They state that unless the prohibition is withdrawn they will stage a one-day strike and make no collection, which would deprive the local hospitals of £3,000.

Rapid Expansion of Remagen Bridgehead

Link-up by First and Third Armies

[Reuter and A.P. Reports]

POURING troops and tanks across the Rhine at Remagen, General Hodges yesterday rapidly built up his newly-secured bridgehead—now at least five miles deep and ten miles wide.

German counter-attacks were beaten off, and, under a powerful "umbrella" of bombers and fighter-bombers, the 1st Army captured a number of towns and villages, including Erpel.

Berlin last night reported Allied attempts to cross the Rhine in the Cologne area.

The 1st and 3rd American Armies have joined up at Andernach, according to a radio report received in New York. It had been estimated that elements of ten German divisions were in the gap between the two armies. These forces have now been cut off.

It was disclosed yesterday that the American 9th Armoured Division captured the Ludendorff bridge at Remagen before the Germans had time to blow it up.

According to Reuter and A.P. reports, the bridge was due to be blown up at 4 p.m., but the Americans reached it at 3.50 and managed to remove the detonators in time.

A German military spokesman said:—"The Allied crossing of the Rhine was the result of chance. The Americans discovered there a bridge which just happened not to have been destroyed. They brought weak forces across this to the eastern bank to form a bridgehead."

The German correspondent Max Krull wrote:—"It is a pure chance that the Americans succeeded in crossing. The Rhine bridge did not explode in time. On the other side, the Americans immediately turned south and reached Linz, where they met with the first opposition."

"Strong German attacks have been launched against the bridgehead" said a German war reporter. "Our troops succeeded in throwing back the Americans from the north and recaptured the locality of Unkel on the east bank, three miles north of Remagen Bridge. To the Ahr Valley the Americans attempted to bring up reserves to Remagen and pushed to the south of the Ahr Valley, but were engaged in heavy forest battles."

North of Remagen the Americans are reported to have captured Bonn and Bad Godesberg.

The U.S. 3rd Army has captured Andernach, a Rhine ferry terminus twelve miles north of Coblenz, and Broehl, four miles farther north, thus winning domination of the Rhine from Cologne northward. Mayen, 16 miles west of Coblenz, was also captured. The Germans destroyed the railway bridge midway between Andernach and Coblenz and the vehicular bridge at Coblenz, leaving the Rhine bridgeless on the 3rd Army front.

The heaviest fighting ever engaged in by the Canadian Army entered its thirteenth consecutive day yesterday on the battlefield west of Wesel. British and Canadian troops made advances, but took a ceaseless pounding. Fighting all round the perimeter of the German bridgehead is extremely bitter.

Troops of the 4th Canadian Army have entered the outskirts of Veen, but were thrown out again in savage fighting when the Germans counter-attacked with heavy artillery and mortars. This was tithe second time the Canadians had fought their way into Veen.

The Xanten area has been completely cleared by British troops, who thrust more than a mile to the south-east, where they are meeting heavy opposition.

According to a Berlin report, the Canadians have started a new large-scale offensive against the German positions west of Wesel. The report claimed that the attack collapsed under terrific German counter-fire.

Russians "Pouring" Over Oder Bridges

SPEAKING from the central Oder front over the German radio last night a German war reporter said the Red Army is pouring reinforcements over their Oder bridges by day and by night.

"Soviet troops, attacking from the north and north-west, have blasted a way into the fortress area of Küstrin," said the German Overseas News Agency. A German war reporter, speaking from the Küstrin front, said that Soviet forces have broken into Neustadt, where "fierce house-to-house fighting is raging."

In an order of the day addressed to Marshal Rokossovsky, Marshal Stalin said that troops of the Second White Russian front yesterday occupied the town of Stolp, an important highway and railway centre on the Danzig-Stettin coast road and railway, and a powerful stronghold in the German defences in Northern Pomerania. 200 other places in the Baltic sector were occupied, including Schlawe, Rueguenwalde and Stolpmuende.

Reuter's Military Correspondent says that the capture of Stolp means that Rokossovsky has practically cut the German pocket in the N.E. Pomerania in two.

Duncan Hooper, Reuter's special correspondent in Moscow, cabled:—

The battle of Stettin has begun on land, sea and in the air, and the outskirts of Danzig are being heavily shelled.

German warships are ranging the Stettin lagoon in attempts to give first aid to German forces. The Germans are also massing all available naval craft in the Oder estuary. Other German warships are standing off the coast of the bay of Pomerania.

"Marshal Rokossovsky is launching troops across the complicated system of channels forming the Vistula delta and has opened a new thrust towards Danzig—apparently to complete the encirclement of the port," said Max Krull, German News Agency commentator.

"Marshal Zhukov and Rokossovsky have achieved a major success by their combined offensive, neutralising the threat to the Red Army's western flank." the German commentator, Col. Von Hammer, stated last night. He estimated that at least 11 Soviet armies—from 500,000 to 1,000,000 men—have taken part in this offensive.

"While the Soviets are preparing new large-scale offensives in East Prussia and Kurland, the strategic picture between the lower reaches of the Oder and the Vistula has undergone a radical change," said Colonel von Hammer. "German troops have had to withdraw Griffen-Hagen (12 miles south of Stettin) has been evacuated."

Colonel von Hammer added that while the battle for the Küstrin bridgehead has assumed the character of a major battle the actions on both sides of Frankfurt are only preliminary bouts.

German reports of fighting on the Berlin front remain unconfirmed in Moscow, says Reuter's special correspondent.

More U-Boats Sunk Last Month

During February a moderate number of Allied merchant vessels fell victims to U-boat activity, but the anti-submarine forces were successful in destroying more German submarines than in January, states the monthly Anglo-American statement on U-boat warfare issued in London yesterday.

"Despite satisfactory results now being obtained in the war on undersea raiders," it is added, "our forces must maintain unceasing vigilance, because any enemy with a large number of submarines always possesses a potential threat."—(P.A.)

New U.S. Army

A NEW U.S. Army—the 15th—has gone into action as part of the 12th Army Group. This Group, commanded by General Bradley, comprises the 1st and 3rd U.S. Armies. Lieut.-General Leonard P. Gerow is the Commander of the new Army.—(Reuter.)

DECISIVE MOMENT OF WAR AT HAND

FROM OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

THE present phase of the Western offensive is now being brought to its logical conclusion by the elimination of the German bridgeheads on the west bank of the Rhine and the total occupation of the Rhineland up to the junction with the Moselle at Coblenz.

It is noticeable that the Germans made no definite effort to retain bridgeheads on the west bank once the elaborate defences of the Siegfried Line had been penetrated; their present holding of certain areas being in the nature of delaying actions designed to facilitate the withdrawal of their forces across the river. This line of action may have been dictated by manpower and equipment problems which compel them to hoard their rapidly diminishing resources, with the object of attempting to hold the Allies on the line of the Rhine and to cover the vital Ruhr industrial area, which not only supplies the bulk of their war equipment but also is the source of the major part of their raw materials, especially coal.

The destruction of Dresden was evidently directed towards eliminating a threat to Koniev's left flank, from the industrial and highly-developed Dresden-Leipzig-Chemnitz area. All these names, whether major or subordinate, reflect a high measure of Allied co-ordination and co-operation. As the situation stands, the decisive moment of the war is close at hand, as the Germans cannot give way on either the Rhine or the Oder and expect to maintain an organised resistance.

Minister Gives Hope to Bookmakers And Owners

THE Government have no intention of "exterminating" bookmakers under the terms of the Racing Board and Racecourses Bill. Neither do they propose to discourage small breeders and owners from maintaining an active part in the horse-breeding industry. All they intend to do is to improve the amenities at racecourses and to ensure that racing will be more prosperous in the future than ever before.

These were some of the important points made by Mr. S. T. O'KELLY, Minister for Finance, when replying to the debate on the bill's second stage in the Dail yesterday.

Their desire, he said, was to make the Racing Board absolutely free of Government interference, to prevent the attendance at racecourses of bookmakers who did not pass on the levy, and to end the many "walk-overs" that were a feature of race meetings "not so long ago."

Having paid tribute to an Irish Times editorial on the bill, Mr. O'Kelly advised Mr. P. J. Fogarty, a member of his own party, who had been critical of the measure, "to pay attention to Irish commentators on the bill rather than to go to the source he did for information as to what was thought of the Bill." He said that the only paper that Deputy Fogarty had quoted from was "one that did not carry much weight in this country."

Deploring speeches "from his own side of the House," Mr. O'Kelly said that some of the comments on members of the Turf Club were unworthy and should not have been made. Some of the people mentioned by deputies on his side of the House had done excellent work for the country and for the racing committee without reward.

Breeders, horsemen and spectators knew the good work that the Turf Club and the National Hunt Steeplechase Committee had done, and it was only right that they should be consulted by anyone seeking to set up new legislation for racing in this country.

BOARD'S JOB

Through the levy and the "tote" they hoped to have £150,000 to further the interests of Irish racing. The Racing Board's job would be to improve racing without injuring anyone. He had been told that the amenities at many racecourses needed improving, and that some racecourse executives were making big profits and pocketing them. It would be the Board's job to counteract such practices, and see that the public got better value for their money.

Until the Board was satisfied that amenities had been improved it should be slow to reduce racecourse fees. If the executives did not improve the amenities the Board should do it themselves. In his opinion bookmakers who did not pass on the levy should not be allowed to "stand on the course."

As Minister responsible for the introduction of the bill he would prefer not to be brought in as an arbitrator in regard to anything connected with racing. The "bookies" would, he hoped, have a representative on the Board to voice any grievances, so that he could not see how they were going to suffer any injury.

He had not seen as many comments in Irish newspapers as he would like to see. "I would like," he added, "to know the reactions of the public, but the Press did not give us a great deal of assistance in finding out their views. But one editorial comment I did read was in the Irish Times a couple of days ago. It dealt with the bill at considerable length and, I am glad to notice, praised it. In the winding-up of that editorial the Irish Times stated, in regard to bookmakers: "The threat of a totalisator monopoly and of their own extinction has been removed, and they will profit more than any other section of the racing community if the sport can be maintained at a prosperous level when peace-time conditions return."

Were it not, he added, for the small owners and breeders the horse-breeding industry would probably die out altogether, and the Government were anxious that they would be encouraged to continue, and would be supported. Many of the country's most famous horses had been bred by small owners.

It certainly was not the intention to give power to increase the charge on bookmakers to £30, £40 or £50.

Urging the provision of bigger stakes, Mr. LIAM COSGRAVE (F.G.) said that pre-war stakes averaged approximately £38. The question of providing proper amenities at racecourses was of the utmost importance, as also was the need for representation on the Board of areas like the West, South, Tramore and the small country meetings. He urged the acceptance of the bill, and said that he was looking forward to the day when Irish horses once again would "act as ambassadors" for this country, and when the Army jumping team would meet and beat all comers in every land.

Mr. J. McCANN (F.F.) suggested that the industry should be put on its merits as a business. He could not see why the racing public should have to pay to improve the management of racing.

Mr. E. COOGAN (F.G.) said that the remarks of Deputies Briscoe and Fogarty in regard to the personnel of the Board were altogether in bad taste and were insulting to people spending a great deal of money in this country. Deputy Briscoe had branded these people as aliens, but he would remind him that the Anglo-Irish gentry had, perhaps, contributed more to national movements here than those whom Deputy Briscoe represented.

Captain P. GILES (F.G.) said that horse-breeding was one of their most important industries, and deserved all the State aid they could give it.

The second stage was agreed to, and the Committee stage fixed provisionally for Wednesday week.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m. on Tuesday next.

PENNY MORE ON DUBLIN CITY RATES

DUBLIN City Rates will be 21/- in the £ next year—an increase of one penny in the pound.

This rate, submitted by the City Manager, was approved by a ... Estimates Committee of Dublin Corporation after a "close investigation," the Lord Mayor (Alderman M. O'Sullivan, T.D.) said last night. Alderman O'Sullivan is Chairman of the Estimates Committee.

The principal increase occurred in the Finance and General Purposes account, and over £40,000 of this increase is due to the higher demand of the Dublin Board of Assistance. The demand of the City of Dublin Vocational Education Committee showed an increase of about £9,000 over the previous year, so that the requirements of both bodies involved an increase of over 5d. in the £.

The City Manager's report stated that the report of last year's estimates proved conclusively that the increase in the city rates was due to the advance in the cost of social service, and that the other city services could be maintained at their present standards on a lower rate than in 1939. It was to be remembered that owing to the emergency some of the city services were operating on curtailed lines, and it was probable that when normal conditions of supply were restored, these services would have to be augmented, with a corresponding increase in cost.

In conclusion, the report stated that it was a matter for satisfaction that the rates, despite increased demands from outside bodies, had only increased by one penny in the pound for the coming year.

The attendance included:—Alderman E. Benson, Alderman P. ... Doyle, T.D.; Councillor John ... Councillor Senator A. Clarke, Councillor P. J. Cahill, and Councillor Senator Denis Healy.

Supply Services Cost More

£47,166,033 WANTED FOR FINANCIAL YEAR

THE estimates for the Supply Services for the financial year, which were issued yesterday, show that the amount required is £47,166,033. The net figure for the financial year 1944-5 was £46,130,689. There has been a steady increase in these Supply Services since the year 1936-7, when the amount was £26,324,000.

The estimate, together with the Central Fund, which usually amounts to around £5,000,000, will form the basis of the coming Budget, but the material available is insufficient to authorise any speculation on what Mr. O'Kelly's taxation limits will be.

The Minister for Finance will give an outline of the position when he moves a Vote on Account for £16,196,000 on next Tuesday in the Dail.

Among the larger increases are a sum of £681,644 for children's allowances, £431,935 for food allowances, £106,710 for the Revenue Commissioners, £149,056 for the Garda, £19,130 for, the Office of Works, £54,020 for superannuation and retiring allowances, £12,316 for Local Government, £93,694 for primary education, £35,460 for secondary and £51,728 for technical education. There is an increase of £91,470 for forestry, transport and meteorological services, £140,574 £160,470 for the Department of Posts and Telegraphs; Army pensions are increased by £37,000, and External Affairs by £9,064.

The decreases included £420,420 on the Army, £102,195 on unemployment insurance, £282,605 on the Department of Agriculture, £200,000 on widows' and orphans' pensions, £45,000 on agricultural subsidies, £14,791 on stationery and printing, £10,000 on old age pensions, £29,464 on public works and buildings.

Heads under which no provision is made include the railways, the alleviation of distress and repayments to the Contingency Fund.

RENOVATIONS

Details given in the volume of Estimates show the following items:—

A sum of £5,376 is being provided for the adaptation and renovation of Johnstown Castle, Co. Wexford, which is to be converted into an agricultural college. Of this sum it is estimated that £1,650 will be spent in the coming year. Renovations at the Tully Stud Farm are provisionally estimated to cost £6,950, and it is expected that the work will be completed in the coming year. Additional accommodation is to be provided at the Veterinary Research Laboratory, the cost of which has not yet been determined, but £1,000 will be spent during the year. A new garda barrack is to be provided at Athlone at a cost of £16,250. New barracks are also to be built at Newmarket-on-Fergus, Kilkenny, Dunleer, and at Ballintogher and Enniscrone, Co. Sligo.

The automatic telephone system is to be introduced in Cork City, and a new exchange, the cost of which has not yet been determined, is to be erected for its accommodation.

Additional accommodation for the Oireachtas is estimated to cost £3,000. The £3,000 grant-in-aid of King's Inns Library is being dropped. Grants to periodicals published in Irish and newspapers publishing current news in Irish are being increased by £600 from £1,400. There is an additional £8,065 for veterinary research. Temporary schemes in connection with farm improvements have an additional £5,652 allocated to them, and an extra £9,233 is being provided for the purpose of the Emergency Powers Tillage Orders.

The strength of the Garda is to be 17,444, compared with 17,320 in the current year. Of the net increase in the Garda vote, salary increases account for £173,487. There is an increased provision of £88,600 for the salaries of teachers and capitation grants.

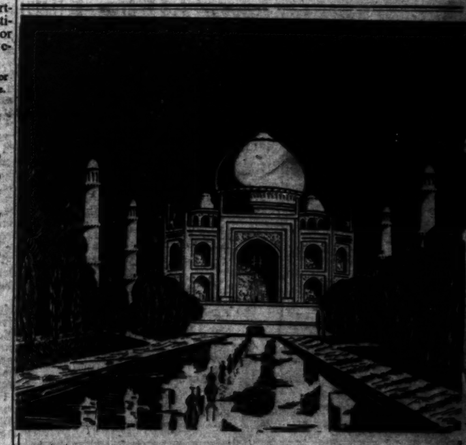
Food subsidies are estimated to cost £3,070,000, an increase of £224,000, and the fuel subsidy is to cost £1,433,000, an increase of £253,000. A sum of £38,000, an increase of £19,000, is being provided for preliminary development of bogs.

A sum of £12,750 is provided for the treatment of venereal disease, as compared with £10,500 in the previous year. The grants to local authorities will be calculated on a basis of 75 per cent. of approved expenditure. There is an increase in the amount to be granted for the treatment of consumptives, £190,000, as compared with £173,000 last year. Grants for the development of bogs by local authorities, at £62,000, are lower than the previous year, when £98,000 was provided. The increased grant for forestry includes an item of £55,000 for cultural operations and maintenance.

Japanese "Take Over" French Indo-China

The Japanese have taken over the full administration of French Indo-China, states a Japanese communiqué, quoted by German Radio. The message said: "The Japanese expeditionary forces in French Indo-China have found it impossible, in face of the insincere attitude of the French Indo-China authorities, to continue to exercise the joint defence of French Indo-China, and in accordance with the decision to defend the country and in order to eliminate enemy influences the Japanese expeditionary forces have taken the necessary steps."—(Reuter.)

Japanese Lose 12 Ships—Twelve Japanese vessels, including an escort carrier and a destroyer, have been sunk in Far Eastern waters by U.S. submarines, the U.S. Navy reported yesterday.—(Reuter.)



AT Agra, India, stands what has been described as one of the loveliest pieces of architecture in existence—the Taj Mahal. When Shah Jehan's wife, Mumtaz Mahal, died, he resolved to build her a memorial such as men had never seen before. Architects, sculptors and builders were summoned from East and West and in 1650, after 20 years unceasing toil, this exquisite dream in marble was completed. It is an eight sided building of white marble, 130 feet long and wide and nearly 200 feet high. Flanked on each side by slender minarets, it stands on red sandstone and is surrounded by stately Persian gardens and quiet pools. The walls inside are covered with floral designs picked out in onyx, jasper, cornelian and other semi-precious stones. Shah Jehan and the wife he so dearly loved sleep beneath the great central dome. Magnificent in its sweeping vastness, this requiem in marble, white and unearthly by the majestic river Jumna is the most beautiful monument in the world. Taj Mahal, "gem of buildings," an everlasting tribute of a man's love for a woman.

"Trilby" and the Bohemian Novel

By Temple Lane

I PICKED up a first edition of George du Maurier's "Trilby"—text and drawings—in Dublin the other day for one and sixpence, and I am still wondering what motive induced the owner of this treasure to part with it.

The book made its sensational appearance in 1895. It was dramatised more sensationally still; but the engaging and intimate qualities of the writing would be lost in a stage or film version. Upon the printed page its melodrama will remain persuasive as long as the Bohemia of "A Winter's Tale" has a sea-coast.

It owed—and still owes—its success as much to manner as to matter. At the time of publication it presented, with just sufficient romanticism, the Bohemian life to a strict and a jaded society—from which the Heir Apparent to the English Throne had escaped to another group, which, if not Bohemian, was at least not regal either. (The fact is touched upon just once in "Trilby.")

My dictionary defines the noun Bohemian as: "A gipsy (because the gipsies were supposed to come from Bohemia): one who leads a free, irregular life, despising social conventionalities." "Trilby" is a story, not of the Nineties, but of the Fifties in retrospect: of the artistic life in Paris, which never palls, with a central section descriptive of fashionable life in London—which is very dull, indeed! When I first discovered the tale in its splendour at the age of thirteen, I left out (and how rightly!) all this central section: every adult should do the same. Nothing happens in it, except for the social historian: the hero holds a dreary conversation with what Mr. Eric Newton calls "one of those anthropomorphic dogs," and decides against marriage with his second-best love because her father cannot accept "The Origin of Species." But the book miraculously floats, despite this block of lead.

The Perfect Title

And how superb it is! Admittedly it "dates": great work can be as dated as Dickens, or it can be out of date (like Blake's) for its own time, as we speak of a picture being out of focus. To the student of literature its provenance is interesting because, together with "The Blessed Damozel" and Hewlett's "Forest Lovers," it completes a trilogy exemplifying the effect of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, not in painting but in literature itself. The first of these is a painter's poem: "Trilby" is the novel of an accomplished draughtsman who had succeeded John Leech as delineator of the Victorian scene in Punch. Hewlett was a writer, pure but not always simple. What a flash of revolutionary prescience was exacted when the staid firm of Macmillan published his romance, for which "Trilby" had set the tone in the disarming intimacy of the author's conversational narrative style and "asides"!

"Trilby" is a good example of the perfect title. This is the heroine's name, with an onomatopoeic quality the significance of which only becomes clear as the story proceeds, from her first grotesque vocalising to the climax of her singing career. There is always a dramatic sense of urgency, not obscured by the overtones—the appearance of leisure, the endearing lapses into personal rumination, the attractive and undated sketches of minor characters.

Trilby Herself

As a literary agent once told me, the plot has whiskers on it. That is true now, but was not true in 1895. The hero's place is taken by "three musketeers of the brush, although the official hero is "Litrebili"—the Quartier's rendering of Little Billee. He shares a studio with the delightful Yorkshireman, Taffy, and a Scot called The Laird. Trilby O'Ferrall is the orphaned daughter of an Irish father and a Scottish mother, neither of them over-respectable. She breaks into the studio, and into the narrative, with tremendous energy and charm. She is kindly, common, beautiful: her feet especially are a composite poem. She is also a model "for the figure"—how shocking to respectability! Both Taffy and Litrebili fall in love: Taffy holds back unselfishly; Litrebili proposes nineteen times, and is accepted only at the twentieth. Unfortunately, Trilby has other drawbacks when envisaged as the wife of a fashionable English painter. Litrebili's conventional but likable mother appeals to "her better nature," and she disappears temporarily from his life.

Here the Pre-Raphaelite influence works in. By the end of the book Trilby is absolutely provided with a halo—"a gentle martyr on earth, a blessed saint in Heaven."

For there is a malign influence, too, the Polish Jew, Svengali. Du Maurier has lifted him bodily out of the horrific illustrations by George Cruikshank in Ainsworth's novels, equating him to any villain and clearing himself—cleverly and rightly—of any charge of anti-Semeticism. Svengali has genius, but of a sinister kind. As a grisette, Trilby was known to have a voice of extraordinary power and compass, but she was completely tone-deaf. Svengali met her again when she was anchorless, and repeated upon her the hypnotism he had practised in the Paris days. She became under this influence a world-famous singer; but she only sang in public for two years, for reasons which the reader is left to discover.

The Pictures

There is nothing sinister in the spell cast by "Trilby." To one du Maurier addict, at least, the illustrations are inseparable from the text. Here is the Paris of foreigners who (apart from the tourists) know Paris and love her—this Paris is ageless, and du Maurier speaks for all. "Trilby" was already a "period" novel at first publication—it is virtually a historical novel now; and the lavishness and prodigality—of words, of emotions, of sensations correct and presentable but vibrating to infinity—produce a "willing suspension of disbelief" in its more fantastic elements. Trilby herself becomes credible and adorable; the reader takes for good friends Taffy and the narrator. Delicious, too, are his chance remarks—"Trilby" is worth possessing for these alone. "There is no class so genial and sympathetic as our own in the long run—even if it be but the criminal class!"

Volumes have been written upon the re-discovery of lovers who meet late in life to find their previous feelings unchanged. No writer has celebrated the emotional satisfaction of reunion with our early loves in poetry and prose, when, with a more fastidious palate, we approve the taste of youthful enthusiasms. I pass on the re-discovery of "Trilby," a breath of clean air in a room long closed.

Rebuilding Britain

Rebuilding Britain: A Twenty-Year Plan. By Sir Ernest Simon. Gollancz. 6/- net.

THE necessity for post-war planning, which may alter our entire conception of democratic life, is now obvious to all thoughtful observers, and this scholarly and well-informed volume by Britain's leading authority on municipal government is bound to have wide influence. If the task of rebuilding Britain is enormous, and if town planning as a science has progressed further in other countries, nevertheless British achievements in the inter-war periods have been considerable. In 1919 there were some 8,000,000 houses in Great Britain; in the subsequent twenty years no fewer than 4,000,000 new houses were built—that is, 50 per cent. of the original total. True, smaller families demand more houses, even for a static population, but such a figure augurs well for post-war capacity, though the demand may be so great that Sir Ernest Simon can envisage a situation in which the ordinary householder and business man will be prevented from spending more than £5 or £10 annually on unlicensed repairs, until the first pressure of the housing shortage is over. All interested in town-planning and local government should read this encyclopædic work.

Deep Waters

Macpherson's Voyages. Edited by John Scott Hughes. Methuen. 15s. net.

AN interesting account is given here of voyages made in the 32-foot cutter, Driac, in which the late A. G. H. Macpherson, with his devoted companion, Bill Leng, sailed over 45,000 miles across oceans, and visited nearly one hundred countries as far apart as Iceland, the West Indies, the East Indies, India, Africa, the Mediterranean and the Baltic States. It was not until his late fifties that Mr. Macpherson enjoyed any small boat sailing, and he was touching sixty when the voyages now described were begun. Seaman will recognise that it was not the smallness of his vessel which makes Mr. Macpherson's voyages chiefly remarkable. So long as she is properly rigged and handled, and keeps away from the land in bad weather, any covered-in small craft of reasonable design is as safe at sea as is the vessel many hundreds of times her size, though perhaps the skill and stamina exacted of the seaman is in inverse proportion to the size of his vessel. More remarkable was the very great number of ports and places visited.

"The Circle"

ONE of the articles in The Circle (Winter, 1944, 1/-), organ of the Dublin Writers' Circle, is entitled "The Great, Though Unknown," and is a plea for the encouragement of young writers. Unhappily, one can see few traces of undiscovered greatness in the work published in the magazine. D. J. O'Sullivan, whose poems have been published in The Bell, shows up best with a short story, "The Keeper." The plot is indifferent; but the lighthouse setting is well drawn, from first-hand experience, and the descriptive writing is quite excellent. Hamilton Allen starts a bank story quite promisingly, but trips over Irish dialect—"And how much wud ye be afther chancin' on Gay Galloper, sor?"—and is flattened by the end. A re-written version of the St. Peter's denial of Christ needs a more skilful pen than that of Constance Maunsell. "Fitz" tells well and fluently the simple story of "Danny Geary's Geese"; this sort of work is much more convincing than the pseudo-sophisticated "First-Class," by M. P. Wall. A plea for young writers is all very well; but they must go further than the imitation of the cheaper English magazine fiction before they can claim support.

Fifty Years of "T.C.D."

T.C.D.: An Anthology, 1895-1945. Printed by the "Kerryman" for the T.C.D. Publishing Co. 6/6 net.

"A CONTINUOUS life of fifty years," writes Dr. D. A. Webb, the editor of this volume, in his preface, "is an achievement of which any paper may justly feel proud; for a University weekly, it is something in the nature of a minor miracle." In the case of T.C.D., the miracle assumes remarkable magnitude. It is written and published by the exertions of an unpaid staff of undergraduates; it receives no support, financial or moral, from the College authorities; it appears eighteen times a year, as compared with three times for most of its contemporaries; it has had a credit balance only twice in its history; and it has to find the bulk of its purchasers among the most fickle of all followings—the undergraduate body. Nevertheless, T.C.D. has been published without a break for the last fifty years; and in this anthology, issued to mark its Golden Jubilee, we are given the opportunity to judge the fruits of half a century's activity.

Many well-known names appear on the list of contributors, which is given in the form of an index to the pseudonyms of the writers. Dr. E. H. Alton, the present Provost; Professors W. R. Fearon, W. B. Stanford and H. O. White are among the present members of the University staff represented in the anthology's pages. Among the others we find Sir James Monroe, Robert Yelverton Tyrrell, J. E. Healy (late editor of the Irish Times), J. C. Forrester, Dr. Newport White, Senator T. C. Kingsmill-Moore, K.C.; Oliver St. J. Gogarty, the poets, J. Lyle Donaghy and Patrick MacDonogh; the Rev. R. P. McDermott, L. J. D. Richardson and Barry St. J. Galvin. From the works of these, and very many more, Dr. Webb has made his admirable selection.

Memories

It is to the old Trinity man, naturally, that the anthology will make most appeal; and the long span of years which it covers is an assurance that it will have something for him, whatever his generation. Is he of what an American might call "the class of '95"? Then he may recall the tumult of "The 1895 Election," in which Lecky was challenged by an oarsman, and may appreciate Tyrrell's references (in Latin verse) to Cathcart. The "man of '13" will delight in J. M. F. Leland's Aristophanic comedy on the founding of the College "Co-op.," with its sketch of Mahaffy and its side-references to Tom Kettle and A.E. The Primus stove may be unknown to the modern student, but Professor White's "Primi Primorum" will bring memories to many; and John Healy's "Interlude" (1896) shows that the day of the College Races changes little, even in almost fifty years. Mahaffy is celebrated again in Gogarty's famous poem, "The Death of Diogenes, the Doctor's Dog." Dr. Webb himself contributes a brilliant verse-play on the 1943 Senate Elections.

Light Verse

Naturally, light verse makes up the bulk of the book; it goes well into anthologies, and T.C.D.—almost its only home in Ireland—has always been rich in it. It ranges from the squib—

That Smith had won I heard the night before;
He'd get the last, they said, with 64.
I asked him round, put strychnine in his tea,
And so I got a School, with 63

—to the playlet, from the strict form of the triolet—

I suppose it's all night!
Is this evening the third?
There's music, there's light,
I suppose it's all right.
If it is the wrong night
Will they give me the bird?
I suppose it's all right!
Is this evening the third?

—to the loose ballad metre of "Dan O'Connell v. Biddy Moriarty." There is some serious verse, too—some of much merit—but it does not maintain the same level of accomplishment; one could scarcely expect it to do so.

Some of the best things, however, are among the prose items. One of them is unsigned—the extremely funny account of a trial in an Indian court, entitled "The Evidence of Mahdo Singh." Another is the work of Mr. R. B. D. French, who, with ten pieces in this volume—only very few people have more than two—may be accounted the star contributor. All his work, verse and prose, is good, but the best of all is his guide to the technique of the obituary notice with its key to phrasing—as:

...possessed a fund of genial anecdote.	Bored everybody with ancient and interminable jokes.
...could not suffer fools gladly	Was a boor and a bully.

Not only T.C.D., the College Miscellany, but Trinity College, Dublin, ought to be proud of this anthology, which collects the best works of many generations of undergraduates; for they will bear comparison, for wit and talent, with any similar works produced anywhere. All readers will echo the wish enshrined by Mr. French in the prefatory Ode to T.C.D.:

So still provide, as in the past,
For poets of a later age
Their first, and probably their last
Emergence on the printed page.

A Pioneer of Journalism

The First War Correspondent. By Rupert Furneaux. Cassell. 12/6 net.

WILLIAM HOWARD RUSSELL was the first newspaper reporter to travel with an army and send home accounts of what really was happening. He was an Irishman, and his first assignment for his paper, The Times, was an Irish parliamentary election. When only 23 years of age he reported the trial of Daniel O'Connell, and his paper would have had a "scoop" had he not given the result to a man who, he thought, was an employee of The Times, but really a clever fellow from the Morning Herald. He described the famine of 1846; and in all his subsequent career, full of the horrors of war, he "never beheld sights so shocking as those which met my eyes in that famine tour of mine in the West."

Russell's fame was derived principally from his dispatches from the Crimea. For the first time in history the British public were told how their soldiers were living and dying. For the first time in history their military leaders were criticised in a newspaper. The circulation of The Times jumped to 51,000, sometimes to 60,000—remarkable figures when it is realised that the price was fivepence a copy (and fivepence in 1854 was worth about 2s. 6d. to-day). The paper rose to the zenith of its power. The disclosures that it made, chiefly through the vigorous chronicles of Russell, stirred the country, caused the downfall of a Ministry, and influenced the direction of the entire campaign in the Crimea.

As a correspondent in India, Russell was equally outspoken. He attacked the campaign of cruelty and vengeance that followed the Sepoy Mutiny. He foresaw the years of future trouble that were being built by those who cried out for blood. He went to the United States for the Civil War there, but he was unhappy, and was made to feel uncomfortable by the Federals, which is not surprising in view of the fact that The Times backed the Confederates, though Russell personally was in favour of the northerners.

"News-getting"

His record in the Franco-Prussian War was not so notable, for fine writing and more authoritative information were of little value when they arrived days behind the stories of some of the rival papers. Mr. Furneaux's chapters on the Franco-Prussian war are most useful for their accounts of the ways and means employed by Russell's rivals to get their stories as quickly as possible to London. One of them, the famous Archibald Forbes, could walk thirty or forty miles to get his message off while the others were searching for a conveyance. To secure an "exclusive" account of the German entry into Paris in 1871 The Times employed a special train from Paris to Calais, a special steamer to Dover and another special train to London. Even so, Forbes arrived in London very soon after The Times' story.

Mr. Furneaux has not written a modern style of book; yet it is extremely interesting, in places stirring, and it adds something to the casual student's knowledge of history. The grammatical style is poor in places, and infinitives are split with such consistency that the author must have chopped them up by design rather than by accident.

Climate and Life

Climate Makes the Man. By Clarence A. Mills. Gollancz. 7/6 net.

THE author, a distinguished American scientist, claims that two external forces — climate, the long-term average of atmospheric conditions, and weather, the short-cycle changes which make one day or hour different from the next—have an extraordinary and dominating effect on man. They affect man's rate of growth, speed of development, resistance to infection, fertility of mind and body, and the amount of energy available for thought or action. The heat of the tropics lulls people into a passive complacency, and saps their vitality; residents of colder climates are driven onwards into restless activity, since natural conditions permit their tissue fires to burn more brightly. Man as an energy machine thinks and acts only because of the burning of food in his tissues, but the speed of this burning, and the intensity of his living, depend largely upon outside temperatures, and how easily he can get rid of his waste heat.

Revolution and conquest have always been considered to spring from the deep inner urgings of people, in the one case from the desire for freedom from tyranny, and in the other from the desire of a few men for power. Prof. Mills believes that the development and growth of those urgings are linked in the most surprising fashion to the rise and fall of the mercury in the thermometers. To quote only two of many such incidents in world history mentioned in the book, the French Revolution and period of Napoleonic conquest took place in the only period of prolonged cold in almost a century.

The Only Door Out. By Mary Wilkes. Faber and Faber. 8/6 net.

Miss Wilkes's novel is curiously inconsistent. She has a pronounced flair for dialogue and characterisation, and her account of Lucy Armyne's infancy, adolescence and university career is most cleverly condensed. But, when Lucy enters a teaching community of Anglican nuns and proceeds to discipline her life along lines completely at variance with her expressed emotions, the conviction of the story begins to falter. In short, whereas the earthly side of Lucy's nature is originally and amusingly developed, her subsequent life of enlightened self-denial is a little shocking. There is, however, no questioning the brilliance of Miss Wilkes's story-telling.

HOW SHE STOPPED HER RHEUMATISM
Not a Single Attack Since Taking Kruschen
At one time this woman suffered badly from rheumatism. Then she found a way to keep it in check, and has been free from it for many years. A remedy that is so reliable is worth knowing about. Read this letter;—
"I have for many years now been taking Kruschen Salts—the small daily dose—and with its aid I have been able to keep rheumatism entirely in check. I was previously very rheumatic, and used periodically to suffer from very painful attacks. Since I have taken Kruschen I have not had a single attack, nor am I troubled now, as I was formerly, with rheumatism in a broken leg, foot and wrist. I owe a great deal to Kruschen Salts."—(Miss) C. E. M.
Rheumatism is primarily caused through an excess of uric acid in the body. Uric acid is one of the waste products of digestion. If the kidneys and bowels become sluggish, they allow this harmful acid to accumulate, and form painful deposits in the joints and muscles.
Kruschen Salts cleanses your body completely of all clogging waste matter and excess acid. The whole secret of Kruschen is in its double action. It acts upon the kidneys and the bowels at the same time, flushing away all poisons and harmful acids, and preventing them from accumulating again.
Every chemist sells Kruschen Salts, price 1/9 per bottle. For rheumatism take half to one teaspoonful in hot water every morning.

NO SHORTAGES

PEACE and plenty—that's what most of us are looking forward to . . . and we think of the two together, with the hopeful feeling that all our embarrassing shortages will be over once peace returns.

But will they? Isn't there one shortage that the return of peace may accentuate?—the shortage of customers. However acute our difficulties may be now, the business man has the satisfaction of operating in a seller's market: there are more customers than can be supplied.

There lies the danger: the customers who cannot be supplied now may have ceased to be customers just when goods become plentiful again—which will be just when the business needs them most.

This brings us to the point: the time to counter the after-the-war shortage of customers is now, and the way to do it is by goodwill advertising.

YOUTHFUL DUBLIN MUSICIANS

Over a thousand pupils from primary schools listened to a concert given in Larkhill Convent National School, Whitehall, yesterday, by junior students of the Municipal School of Music, under the auspices of the City of Dublin Vocational Education Committee.

The young performers, some of whom were only seven years of age, played excerpts from the classics and Irish airs. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Michael MacNamara, was praiseworthy, judged from any standard, but, considering the youth of its members, it was excellent.

Before each item Mr. D. Ua Braoin, Inspector of Music to the Department of Education, explained the functions of the various instruments.

A violin solo was given by Jack Ronayne and a piano solo by Annie Kelly.

CHURCH AND STATE

When doctors differ the patient, despite the old saw, does not necessarily die; but it is fairly safe to assume that his recovery is likely to be retarded. This assumption is as true of the body politic as it is of the human body, and every good citizen must be perturbed when he finds violent differences of opinion among those who have been entrusted with the care of his interests. More than six years ago the Government appointed a Commission on Vocational Organisation, the chairman of which was the Most Reverend Dr. Browne, Bishop of Galway. It was a representative body, including experts of various kinds, and after five and a-half years it produced a voluminous and comprehensive report, the preparation of which cost no less than £10,306. Experts have been described as persons who know more and more about less and less. It also has been said of them as a class that they avoid all the minor mistakes, while sweeping onwards towards the major fallacy; but there is no doubt that Dr. Browne and his colleagues went to an immensity of pains to turn out a report which, in the very nature of things, was exceedingly long, and, in certain respects, rather difficult to understand. Nevertheless, for all its faults, it was, in our opinion, a sincere document, prepared with meticulous care. Last month in the Senate the Minister for Industry and Commerce subjected it to some rather scathing criticism. He described it as "slovenly," accused its authors of mis-statements of fact as well as of contradictory recommendations, and spoke of the "nagging propagandist tone" of the report, which might be due to unfortunate draughtsmanship or "a desire to bicker." Naturally enough, the Chairman of the Commission has not allowed these criticisms to go by default. In the course of an address in Galway during the week, Dr. Browne made a vigorous reply to Mr. Lemass's strictures, defending the work of the Commission in forceful style. We do not propose to enter into the details of the controversy between the Minister and the Bishop. Dr. Browne denies Mr. Lemass's allegations flatly, admitting that the Commission's report may not be perfect, but reminding the Minister, not without effect, that amendments were being made to the Military Pensions Act because, with all the skilled draughtsmen at their disposal, the Oireachtas and the Government had not been able to say what they meant! Dr. Browne declared that he was not concerned with petty things, but with what he described as "the long-term interests of the Irish people," as well as with the decencies of life and the control of their tongues by public men. In view of these glaring clashes of opinion between the Minister, whose Government was originally responsible for the appointment of the Vocational Organisation Commission, and the Chairman, whom it nominated, the man-in-the-street must begin to wonder whether the whole business was worth the trouble and the money that it cost. The Commission's report contains much interesting information of a miscellaneous kind. Whether its proposals ever will emerge from its covers is open to doubt.

It has been for long a favourite charge against the twenty-six counties—particularly among our kinsfolk in the North—that Eire is moving towards something like a theocratic State. Lurid pictures have been painted of a priest-ridden community, dominated entirely by the Bench of Bishops at Maynooth, and being driven farther and farther away from the democratic principles of the Constitution. Some faint shade of colour may have been given to these allegations by the appointment of certain distinguished ecclesiastics as chairmen of important Commissions; but if it were necessary to refute them, Mr. Lemass's attitude towards the Vocational Organisation Report ought to be enough. Yet it does not stand alone. Last October the National Health Insurance Society released for publication "Outlines of a Scheme of National Health Insurance," a paper which was read to the Committee of Management by the Most Reverend Dr. Dignan, Bishop of Clonfert, who is its chairman. This paper adumbrated His Lordship's proposals for what might be termed an Irish "Beveridge Scheme," going even farther in some respects than the English plan, and based broadly on the famous Papal Encyclicals. The proposals were given wide publicity. They were received favourably in many quarters; but the Minister for Local Government and Public Health was not impressed. When questioned in Dail Eireann by the leader of the Labour Party last January, Mr. MacEntee declared that many of Dr. Dignan's proposals were impracticable, and accordingly no further action on the basis of the paper would be warranted. General Mulcahy asked the Minister to state under what heading he had found the Bishop's proposals impracticable; Mr. MacEntee's reply was short and succinct — "Under almost every heading." We confess that we have much sympathy with the Minister in this case. The Bishop of Clonfert is a prelate of high ability, but his proposals for social security in this country, while admirable in their general purpose, hardly would pass the detached scrutiny of men of affairs. His Lordship admitted that he had not had the assistance of a fully qualified actuary in the preparation of his scheme; and it must be obvious to everybody that a task of such magnitude involves actuarial research of the most complicated kind. The "Dignan Scheme" has been hailed with enthusiasm by those who regard the State as a sort of fairy-godmother, whose primary duty is to maintain everybody at the public expense. The Minister responsible to Dail Eireann, however, must put every plan that is submitted to him to the cold test of reality; and Dr. Dignan's proposals, attractive as they are, have failed to pass that test. It is only to be expected that, in a devoutly Catholic country, anything bearing the imprimatur of a Bishop should command exceptional attention; but in the last analysis the Government must be the deciding authority. We are sorry that on two such issues as Vocational Organisation and Social Security, Ministers should find themselves at variance with distinguished prelates who have been appointed chairmen of important public bodies. In the long run, however, such differences of outlook may not be an unhealthy sign. Without occasional disagreements there can be no true progress.

New Pennies

"Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves," must be among the world's most dangerous doctrines. How many people acquire an ardent—almost a ferocious—interest in the collection of three-penny-bits, who are incapable of saving shillings, let alone pounds, when the occasion arises? The question is prompted by an account in the Manchester Guardian of the strange fate that has befallen new pennies in England. It appears that the British people are inclined to hoard new and bright pennies, with the result that the normal flow of coinage has been impeded. The Royal Mint, in an effort to counteract this tendency, turned out dull and darkened pennies for its 1945 issue; but the people were not deceived. The bright coins of previous years had been attractive by virtue of their appearance; the new products appealed by virtue of their novelty—and were stored away even more cheerfully. It looks as if the Mint is in a quandary. As the newspaper suggests, it might turn out pennies with the inscription, "not to be hoarded," but such coins would have an indisputable value as souvenirs or collection pieces. Let the Mint, and the British Government, console themselves with the realisation that it is merely a matter of pennies. If people began to hoard five-pound notes, or one-pound notes, as readily as they lay aside copper coins and threepenny-bits, there would be greater reason for alarm; the pounds would take care of themselves in a manner that would cause acute distress to the Bank of England. One sympathises with the Mint, which manifestly must have all its calculations upset; yet it must recognise that the human instinct to collect something is strong, and that few things are available nowadays for collection. Stamps are rare; foreign coins are unobtainable. Threepenny-bits and new pennies, on the other hand, can be had anywhere; and they possess the great virtue that they will be legal tender in a moment of emergency.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON.
FRIDAY NIGHT.

A NUMBER of enterprises here announce plans for the salvage of merchant and other ships when peace is restored. Some firms are claiming that twelve million tons of shipping and great quantities of valuable cargo will be recovered economically, but an expert in the world of salvage here said to-night that these figures should be treated with reserve. What is certain is that post-war salvage at sea will provide many stories as thrilling as that of the salvage of the gold in the liner Egypt, which was sunk in deep water off Brest. The Italian salvage vessel which made the first attempt blew up, but later attempts were successful, thanks to "Wizard" diving suits which were designed. One of the salvage jobs nearest to the Irish coast after the last war was a liner 8,100 yards off Fanad Head, from which several hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of bullion was recovered.

Great Liners

Among the liners sunk in this war was the Lancastria, Laurentic and Carinthia (Cunard White Star); the Empress of Britain (Canadian Pacific), the 42,000 tons Caledon and Transylvania (Anchor Line), and the Waitara (New Zealand). The most valuable cargo of all was one of £6,000,000 worth of gold, which was on a small vessel which left Toulon in 1940 and was sunk by air attack in the Atlantic.

Woman Politician.

Mrs. Pakenham, wife of the Hon. Frank Pakenham, prospective Labour candidate for the Oxford City constituency, is a politician in her own right, as some few years ago she was adopted prospective Labour candidate for a Birmingham City constituency. She is a cousin of the Chamberlains, and is determined to carry the Socialist banner into the Conservative stronghold. In a speech at Oxford to-day Mrs. Pakenham claimed that the Conservatives had not really learned the lessons of slumps and unemployment. The only party with power between the two wars, they were responsible for the slums and poverty, and for the betrayal of the League of Nations. Since they stood for the capitalist system, for inequality and privilege, how could they afford social security and the same education for all? It was trade union pressure that had got the Beveridge report, and Conservatives wanted to claim credit for it, while waging a secret battle to whittle it down.

CONCERNING MR. SHAW

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES

SIR,—What a pity that Mr. Shaw always starts out to say something rational, and even important, and ends up in talking the most horrible nonsense. In his recent letter quoted in your columns, he writes: "As the necessary work of weeding the garden becomes better understood, the present restriction of liquidation (blessed word!) to murder-cases . . . will cease, and must be replaced by State-contrived euthanasia for all idots and intolerable nuisances." If this is just Shaw's fun (but I suspect him of meaning it), I should say that in the year 1945 we ought to know a little too much about "State-contrived" liquidations, both with and without gas, to be funny about them.

I wonder very much if there is at present any country in Europe—excepting dear, dense, civilised and tolerant old England—where Mr. Shaw himself would not be regarded as an "intolerable nuisance." It is clear (though incredible) that all the ghastly things that have happened in the world during the last 20 years and more have taught G.B.S. absolutely nothing; while he has been talking, various other—possibly less pure-minded—leaders of thought have been busy putting his doctrines into practice. His statement that the theory of deterrence makes it a matter of complete indifference whether the person we hang is guilty or not" may carry weight with lynching-mobs, but it is not particularly logical; and his suggestion that the girl-murderer should be "found dead some morning in a quite comfortable lethal-chamber not known to her to be such" adds a note of gruesome horror to the whole argument. What guarantee have I that in the Shavian Utopia I should not any morning wake up to find myself liquidated, in a gas-chamber not known by me to be such?

Incidentally, I am, of course, opposed to executions, whether by means of poison-gas or otherwise, but, if people have to be done to death, it is certainly desirable that they should be tried for a definite offence, and that sentence should be publicly passed on them. I must apologise, Mr. Editor, for these axiomata, but when we want comic-strip stuff have we not the inimitable Myles? I prefer his kind of laughing-gas.—Yours, etc.,

ARLAND USSHER.

SUFFERED ACUTELY AFTER MEALS

Great Comfort from Rennies

Two hours after a meal this woman used to suffer acute discomfort from indigestion. Fortunately she has now found a way to overcome this trouble. Her letter will interest other sufferers:—

"I have suffered from indigestion for a long time. It takes the form of acute discomfort about two hours after meals, making everything a great weariness and effort until it is relieved. I find Rennies the greatest comfort in this condition—they always relieve me after taking one or two, and I don't know what I should do without them. Nothing else seems to give me the same relief." —(Miss) G. B.

Digestif Rennies ended this woman's indigestion because of their three-fold action. Rennies contain antacids which neutralise acidity, absorbents which reduce stomach gas, and digestive ferments which actively aid digestion. Rennies dissolve in the mouth. They become active at once, because they reach your stomach full strength—not weakened with water. Each Rennie tablet is individually wrapped, so that you can carry a few loose in pocket or handbag.

All Chemists sell Rennies: 7d & 2/- box.

TAYANGLET MAY STEP UP ON NAAS FORM

FIELDS are again of good size at Leopardstown to-day and racing should be bright and interesting.

There should be an open "market" on the Dalkey Handicap Hurdle. Astrometer made the journey to Thurles on March 1st without success, but he will be better suited to this galloping circuit than the Tipperary track. If Colehill accepts this engagement instead of the Leopardstown Chase, he will have many supporters, but Airy Prince, King of the Jungle and Tayanglet may provide a repeat of their Naas finish of a week ago. Although he won well, the 7lb. penalty he earned may just about beat Airy Prince, and in choosing between King of the Jungle and Tayanglet, the latter is slightly preferred. He did not come on the scene until late in the race, and the more favourable conditions underfoot to-day will be to his liking.

Tote Double on Fourth and Sixth Races.

Doremi has right good claims for the Leopardstown Chase, which will be run over her ideal distance —2 m. 175 yards, and most danger may come from Red Branch. Selections:—

M'Cormack An Easy Winner

SPIKE McCORMACK atoned for his recent defeat at the hands of Pat O'Connor by outpointing Freddie Price, of Galway, at the Rotunda Cinema last night. Price has an impressive string of victories to his credit over the leading Irish middle-weights, but he was never in the hunt with McCormack, who looked very fit and gave a storming, aggressive display from start to finish.

It was a scrambling, unscientific affair, for realising that his opponent had little ability at long range, McCormack was looking for a knock-out all the way, and his punching was somewhat wild.

He did land a number of heavy ones, but he might as well have been hitting a brick wall for all the effect he had on Price, who never looked particularly shaken despite the fact that he spent most of the time with his back on the ropes. With no sting in his left hand, Price's one punch was a right upper-cut, and he scored frequently with this at close range; indeed, he often had the better of the in-fighting, but he took all that was coming at long range.

After McCormack had piled up an early lead, Price improved considerably mid-way through the fight, and it looked for a short time as if he might wear down his opponent as O'Connor had done, but McCormack came back very strongly and scored with a lot of heavy punches in the last two rounds.

ARMOUR RETIRES

Jimmy Ingle was boxing convincingly and leading well on points in his fight against Tommy Armour when the latter had to retire after the fifth round with an injured hand.

Ingle got home again and again with heavy rights to head and body, though he did not gain the full effect of the weight of the punches on account of the fact that so many of them were delivered with other than the knuckle part of the glove. His left lead paved the way for the right in good fashion, particularly in the earlier rounds. Armour's right, however, was weak on the lead, but his left hook landed successfully and with good effect from time to time. Ingle was in dictation of the fight for most of the time, however, and his heavy-handed attacks brought him to the fore in each round.

It was a good fight, and it was a pity that it should finish as it did.

Tommy Dunne and Con Caffrey put up a lively fight in the feather-weight eliminator, Dunne winning on points. Dunne's weighty right took some toll in the early rounds, though it would have been much more effective if it had been better timed. Caffrey's pluck was in great evidence throughout, however, and he waded in all the time, getting home many full-blooded lefts and rights.

In what must be counted as one of the poorest professional bouts seen in Dublin for years, Danny O'Brien beat Jack Lenihan on points.

Feather—Tommy Dunne (Dublin) beat Con Caffrey (Dublin) on points.

Middle—Danny O'Brien (Dublin) beat Jack Lenihan (Cork) on points; Jimmy Ingle (Dublin) beat Tommy Armour (Belfast)—retired injured after fifth round.

Fly—Jim Collins (Dublin) beat Johnny Carons (Austria)—retired after second round.

Middle—Spike McCormack (Dublin) beat Freddie Price (Galway) on points.

Gaffney Was A Good Winner

KNOCKS-OUT were at a premium at Sandymount Club's tournament at the Stadium last night, when a team from the promoting club fought a Munster selection.

J. Keenan, Munster champion—a last-minute selection—provided tough opposition for the virile J. Gaffney. The former carried a strong right, but he showed little initiative in following up any advantage gained, and Gaffney's quickness to the punch and relentless straight left gave him a well-merited points' win.

M. Talbot (Tramway) lost by a narrow margin in the welter contest to T. Hyde (Cork), runner-up in the National Senior Championships, the latter gaining valuable points with his right; while E. Andrews (St. Andrew's), the "broadcasting boxer," was always on top in his middle-weight contest with Tpr. McGrath (Limerick).

Juvenile Contests—Cpl. McGregor (Sandymount) beat F. McGoldrick (Whitehall); V. Hayes (Whitehall) beat J. Hanlon (Sandymount); L. Byrne (Sandymount) beat D. Galston (Whitehall).

SENIOR CONTESTS

Bantam—E. Cannon (North City) beat M. Kelleher (Cork); F. Seanlon (Corinthians) beat S. Murphy (Cork).

Feather—J. Gaffney (Sandymount) beat J. Keenan (Cork).

Light—P. Foran (St. Andrew's) beat P. Kennealy (Cork).

Welter—T. Hyde (Cork) beat M. Talbot (Tramway).

Middle—E. Andrews (St. Andrew's) beat Trooper McGrath (Limerick).

Heavy—P. Troy (Garda) beat J. Tierney (Phoenix).

A DUBLIN SELECTION

The following team has been chosen to represent Dublin University in the Combined Universities at Trinity College Gymnasium on March 12th:—

OBITUARY

MR. A. E. MacFARLANE

Mr. A. E. MacFarlane, who has died at his residence, 169 Cliftonpark avenue, Belfast, was a grandson of the Rev. Dr. Alexander Badin, former Moderator of the Church of Scotland. He was Treasurer of the Congregational Union of Ireland from 1917 and a former Chairman. He carried on business as an estate agent and auctioneer.

CAPTAIN ERNEST PHIPPS

The death has occurred in Mallow, Co. Cork, of Captain Ernest Phipps, M.R.C.V.S. A native of South Cregg, Fermoy, Co. Cork, he served in the Boer War in the 45th Imperial Yeomanry under Lord Longford. During the Great War he was a captain in the Royal Army Veterinary Corps. Before he went to Mallow in 1919 he was for a short time in Bansha, Co. Tipperary. In Mallow he was prominently associated with the Duhallow Hunt, of which he was secretary from 1923 to 1928. He was honorary president of the Mallow Anglers' Association, and he was professionally associated with the Mallow racecourse for nearly 19 years.

The chief mourners at the funeral, which took place yesterday to Goolds-hill Cemetery, were:—Mrs. M. E. Phipps (widow); Mr. John Pedder Phipps, the Rev. C. B. Phipps (Dublin), Mr. Henry Phipps (Fermoy), Messrs. Albert, Botram and Harold Phipps (brothers); Mrs. H. Peard and Mrs. Henry Phipps (sisters-in-law). Another brother, Mr. Walter Phipps, V.S., Oxford, and Mr. Harry Peard were unavoidably absent.

APPEAL AGAINST FIRE DAMAGE AWARD

An appeal from a malicious damage award of £2,000 in respect of the burning of 500 tons of straw, the property of the Killeen Paper Mills, Ltd., at Ballybofarmott, on February 28th, last year, was opened, before Mr. Justice Haugh, in the High Court yesterday, and adjourned. The appeal was on behalf of Dublin County Council, and the only question was whether the fire had been malicious or not.

Mr. J. A. Costello, S.C. (instructed by Messrs. Arthur Cox and Co.), for the company, said that there had been a strike at the mills at the time of the fire, and, with the exception of two watchmen, no employees had been working there from early on the previous Saturday. These outbreaks negatived all reasonable explanations except malice. The amount of the decree represented only the cost price of the straw. At the hearing in the Circuit Court the County Council had advanced a theory of a burning rat running from one rick to another.

TRUST HOUSE TENANT MUST PAY RATES

When William J. Behan, Sailors' and Soldiers' Trust Houses, Bluebell, Co. Dublin, applied at Kilmainham to have a Court Order for non-payment of rates varied from £1 to 10s. per month, Mr. Desmond Moran, solicitor, stated that since the order was made in 1941 his client had been in bad health. He had a pension of £2 per week from the British Army, 7s. 6d. National Health Insurance benefit and received £1 15s. weekly from three of his children who were working. He was unable to pay £1 per month.

Miss Early, solicitor for the Dublin County Council, said that Behan had not paid rates for years and had given great trouble to the rate collector.

District Justice Reddin, refusing to vary the order, said that the defendant had made no effort to pay the amount due. If a Committal Order was issued and the defendant did not pay, he would go to jail.

New Red Cross Branches.—New branches of the Irish Red Cross Society have been formed at Clontarf and Fairview, Dublin. The Chairman of the Clontarf branch is the Ven. Archdeacon MacMahon, P.P., and that of the Fairview branch the Rev. Walter McDonald, P.P.

Date of Trial Fixed.—The Special Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, fixed April 5th as the date of trial of Richard Flynn, a member of the Defence Forces, who is accused of having on February 14th, at Tralee, stolen a rifle, the property of the Minister for Defence. Also he is charged with receiving the rifle.

Alleged "Quick Result"

Christopher O'Connell (35), cattle agent, Drumcliffe road, was remanded in the Dublin District Court yesterday on charges of obtaining by a trick £42 18s. 11d. and £6 12s. 6d., the property of Messrs. J. and M. Mirrelson, turf accountants.

The State case, made by Mr. L. J. Lysaght, Chief State Solicitor's Department, was that O'Connell handed in an each-way "treble" bet in respect of two horses running in races at 4 o'clock and a third horse running in a race at 4.30 on February 17th. In handing in the slip O'Connell wrote the name of the horse running in the 4.30 race at Cheltenham first, followed by the names running in the 4 o'clock race at Wetherby and the 4 o'clock race at Cheltenham. The case was that the slip was not handed in until the results of the 4 o'clock races were known, and that O'Connell was simply gambling on the result of the third race.

In similar manner O'Connell, he alleged, handed in a "treble" each-way bet in respect of the 4.30 race at Wetherby and the 4.30 race at Cheltenham and the 5 o'clock race at Cheltenham, the bet being handed in when the results of the two 4.30 races were already known in the office. In this case O'Connell received £6 12s. 6d. winnings.

The runner in the third race was again a hot favourite, and its name appeared first on the betting slip. O'Connell was seen by Miss Cunningham, the clerk, and the porter, Corcoran, to have read the results of the earlier races before handing in his bets.

There was also a charge against him of trying to obtain the sum of £20 at the same office by placing a £5 each way bet, but the girl told O'Connell that Mr. Mirrelson wanted to speak to him about the two dockets in the previous week "as quick ones had been worked."

When charged O'Connell said that the bets were genuine and had been placed in time. The reason he put the horses in the later races first on the list was that he very much fancied them.

POINTS TO NOTE

Reports from various parts of the country affirm that farmers almost everywhere are busier than ever before in preparing the ground for, and sowing SPRING WHEAT.

In times of hurry small things are apt to be overlooked, but it is well worth while to keep the following points in mind,

- The rate of seeding for Spring Wheat should be about 15-16 stones per statute acre or 24-29 stones per Irish acre.
- If at all possible seeds should be tested before being sown.
- If the germination is less than about 90% the rate of seeding should be proportionately increased.
- All seeds should be dressed with a mercurial seed dressing before being sown.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SOW SPRING WHEAT

GUINNESS GO AHEAD

PUBLIC interest was on a broad scale on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, and markets were active. Irish Industrials claimed the bulk of attention, and good buying resulted in some firm features.

Home Government Funds were not so busy, and Second National Loan eased to 113¼, but Security Loan recovered to 106¾. 4½ p.c. New Land Bonds advanced 15s. to 116½. British Funds held steady, and Dublin 4½ p.c. 1955-75 firmed up to 110. Guinness Units were in good demand, and jumped 1s. 3d. to 139s. 3d. The Transport Group made a steadier showing, apart from Coras Iompair Common, which was still quietly offered, and gave way 1½ points to 70. Associated Chocolate Deb. tended higher to 21s. 6d., and Associated Properties Pref. soared 1s. 6d. to 28s. 6d. Cement Ord. hardened to 47s., Clondalkin Paper Ord. to 6s. 8d., and Ever Ready (Ireland) Ord. to 12s. 7½d.
